‘The present epoch will perhaps be above all the epoch of space. We are in the epoch of simultaneity: we are in the epoch of juxtaposition, the epoch of the near and far, of the side-by-side, of the dispersed. We are at a moment, I believe, when our experience of the world is less that of a long life developing through time than of a network that connects points and intersects with its own skein.’
-Michel Foucault

‘Race inscribes and circumscribes the experience of space and time, of geography and history, just as race itself acquires its specificity in terms of space-time correlates’
-David Goldberg

‘What is an ideology without a space to which it refers, a space which it describes, whose vocabulary and kinks it makes use of, and whose code it embodies’?
—Henri Lefebvre

Course Description
This multi-disciplinary seminar examines how space and place are constitutive of social, cultural and economic relations with particular emphasis on race and its intersections with class, gender, and nationhood. We are interested in questions such as: How does spatial analysis broaden our understanding of social issues and problems? How is race cast within the spatial discourses of the physical terrain, as well as imagined spaces and places? How does the differentiation of space and place emerge from unequal and uneven configurations of power locally and globally? How are different discourses and representations mobilized to construct places and their people as peripheral, deviant, dangerous and disorganized?

Required reading
Murray Forman The 'Hood Comes First: Race, Space, and Place in Rap and Hip-Hop.
Tim Cresswell Place: A Short Introduction
Richard Schein Landscapes and Race in the United States
Anoop Nayak Race, Place and Globalization: Youth Cultures in a Changing World

Readings marked  can be accessed through the library under electronic journals

Assignments:
Class members will contribute in an informed and courteous manner to class discussions, write bi-weekly thought papers, take a midterm, complete homework/in class assignments and produce a final group project and paper.

Midterm A take home essay drawing from all class materials will be handed out on March 11th. The response should be typed, 6-7 pages, 12 point font and directly respond to the question(s) asked. Bibliography on additional page. Due in sakai ‘assignments’ March 23rd by 5.00pm. 20%.
Informed participation, attendance and critical response papers: You are expected to come to class having read all the assigned readings and are encouraged to bring extra curricular issues or current events related to the readings. Each student is expected to participate in and contribute to all seminar discussions. There is a critical response due for each day’s readings unless instructed otherwise. They are designed to help you reflect critically on the texts, improve your reading comprehension, prepare you for the seminar discussions and enable me to verify that you are thoroughly reading each week’s assigned texts. Critical response papers require three sections. The main part of your response should address the following points for ONE article of your choice for the day’s readings.

- What is the author’s central claim, argument, or point?
- What assumptions does the author make?
- What evidence is used to support the author’s claim?
- Are you convinced by the argument? Why? Why not? (Ie what are the strengths and weaknesses of the text?)
- How can you trouble/counter/modify the text’s claims?
- What is gained and what is lost by focusing on a spatial analysis?
- Is the article interesting or important? Why? Why not? (perhaps bring in personal experience/contemporary debate etc)

In the second part you will, bring together all the days readings into an integrated whole. In considering the texts collectively you must address:

- How the articles relate to one another (e.g. Formulate a problem in different ways?)
- Do the texts collectively texts advance your understanding of a larger issue? How? If not, why?

Finally you will devise a couple of questions for possible discussion in class.

You must bring a copy of your response to class as well as post them on sakai ‘drop box’ by Monday noon for Tuesday classes and Thursday noon for Thursday classes. 60%

Group Project. This is your chance to pursue a research topic that incorporates race, space and place as a group. This can be a formal paper or you can choose to work in a more creative medium (web design, film/video, etc.). You may draw your topic from the areas covered in the course syllabus, or you may choose another related topic that is of interest to the group. The goal is to explore how race, place and space relate to, illuminates, and is informed by a topic of your concern. You are encouraged to begin thinking about this project early in the semester. You will have a chance to brainstorm during class on March 30th. The formal paper should be typed, 12 point font and consist of 4-5 pages per person. A complete bibliography must be provided (exclusive of the 4-5 pages required). Groups will present their research findings orally at the end of the semester. If your group decides on a creative project you need to append a critical paper that explains how materials from the course inform the conception of your creative project (2 pages per person). Groups should be no bigger than 4 people and no smaller than 2. Presentations will occur in alphabetical order –group wise. Final papers due last day of class on sakai ‘assignment’ by noon May 4th. 20%.
Group Project Proposal Outline.
What? What are the issues, question or problem?
Why? What are the theoretical underpinnings and broader relevance to race, place and space?
How? What methods are you going to use?
Where? What readings and other resources are you going to use?
Division of Labor How is the group going to divide the work equitably? What is your work plan? How will the group be accountable for their input? Who is doing what?

Group project outline is due in class and on sakai on April 15th

Please note:
- Written papers - due on time. Late means less.
- No electronic devices in class: they distract other students and responding to emails in class or any other web based pursuits is simply not on.
- Missing classes means lowering your grade. If you miss class it is your responsibility to obtain class notes and announcements from other students. It is not mine.
- Walking into class late is not permissible. If you are late and do not have a valid excuse do not bother coming into class. It is disruptive. More than three absences will affect your grade according to the number of absences accrued unless accompanied by an official document.
- No plagiarism.
- No papers written for me from another class.
